The said employers are consequently the gathers of one dollar per week for every girl employed by them—their dollar being taken from the means of the laborars, and its loss necessitating, probably, more pinching self-denial and disconfort. It is said by the proprietors of the factories, as is always said in suntances, that they could not afford to pay the old rate of wages, and that they were obliged either to make the reduction or entirely suspend business. We know nothing about the merits of this excuse. If cetton factors can but afford to pay the old rate of wages, and to one part of the profits should now be devoted to ranning their concerns, even at a loss, nutil a season based to amass humense fortunes during their concerns, even at a loss, nutil a season believed to the control of the The property of the property o
